Sworn to no Master, of no Sect am I. AN EXECUT VE COUNTILLOR A BANK DIRECTOR.

MR. MARTIN is to move this evening, in the regislative Council, " that as the Government of this colony is at present constituted, it is highly inexpedient and improper for any member of the Executive Council to be a Director of any banking institution carrying on business n the colony.

While we entirely agree with the substance of this resolution, we think it might have been more judici-eusly worded. Nanting the usual qualifying prefix, "that it is the opinion of this Councit," it has an air of degmation offensive to good taste. And, while necessary words are left out, unnecessary words are put in. The thing declared to be wrong is declared to be wrong only as the Government of this colony is at present constituted." We think it would be wrong howsoever the Government might be constituted. For a member of the Cotonial Executive to be a director of a colonial bank would surely be wrong under any circumstance s.

Mr. Martin's motion is founded on s fact. He elicited from the Arpirou-GENERAL, the other evening, that that honorable gentleman is one of the directors of the London Chartered Bank; and as the SUDITOR GENERAL is a member of the Pxecutive Council, Mr. MARTIN proposes to take the sense of the house touching the expediency and propriety of such a combination of official trusts. As a sworn adviser of the Governor Gen. BRAL, it is Mr. MEREWETHER's duty to study the interests of the public; as a Director of the Bank, it is his duty to a Director of the Bank, it is his duty to study the interests of the shareholders. These duties may happen to clash. The laterests of the public may be at variance with those of the Company. The honogentleman would then be in the predicament of having two rival masters, and would be under the necessity of bating the one and loving the other, or holding to the one and despising the other. The bare possibility of such a case is enough, in edient and improper" for an Executive Councillor to incur the risk.

The honour of the Government ought to be at least as pure and above suspicion as the honour of commercial men. We have a case in point in the history of a recently estabished Bank. A merchant was asked to be one of its first Directors, but declined the office on the ground that his co-partner in business was a Director of another of our Banks. He felt, therefore, that his acpoint of fact be followed by nothing wrong in itself, might expose his firm to suspicion and misrepresentation : might at any rate, in the eyes of the public, have a bad appearance; and it holds good with respectable merchants as with all other respectable men, that they should avoid not only the reality but the appearance of evil.

The Council will hardly hesitate to affirm this great principle on the present occasion.

HARD LABOUR BILL,

On the motion of the SOLICTTOR-GENERAL the Governor-General's Message No. 19,

T e SOLICITOR GENERAL then moved. The SOLICIFOR-GENERAL then moved, that the Bill be read a first time. He would shortly state the nature and object of the measure. In the 11th year of the present reign an act was passed regulating the punishments to be substituted in lieu of transportation, and it was found that one clause of that Act treated a difficulty as to the place where prisoners sentenced to hard labour could be sent. The 6th section enacted that any purson fined at oness the place where any trinogers. fore necessary to introduce some other pro-

EQUITY PRACTICE BILL.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL seconded the EQUITY PRACTICE BILL.
The SOLICIPOR-OENE AL moved that this bill be read a second time. It would,
p-thaps, be convenient that he should offer a few observations explanatory of the one in of the measure and its provisions. It was four ded entirely on an English Act of Parliament passed last session. No provisions were introduced which were not contained in that introduced which were not contained in that measure, although some of its enactments were consisted, being unsuited to the circumstances of the colony. The Act of Parliament to which he alluded had been considered with very great care. The reforms it introduced were proposed by the Commissioners for Liw R form appointed by the Queen, namely, the Commissioners of the Court of Canacery, the Equity Judges, the Common Law Judges, and two laymen, Sir James Graham, and Mr. Henley. Lord Chancellor Furo had introduced a bill in a mformity with their recommendations, and it had subsequently been adopted by Lord St. Leonard, and passed through both Houses of Parliament as a government measure. He would not adopted by Lord St. Leonard, and passed through both Houses of Parliament as a government measure. He would not enter at any considerable length into its details, which were chiefly of a technical nature, affecting not pir ciples of law, but the procedure of the Courts; but he would bri-fly allude to the leading features of the bill. The measure was framed in a genuire spirit of reform; and if it did not g quite so far as could be wished, still it must be regarded a an instalment in the progress of law reform. Now everyone acq minted with the ordinary proceedings in equity was aware that one of the most intolerable grievances was, that all persons interesed, even in the remotest degree, in any cause, were made parties to the aut, and, even if they possessed an interest which was absolutely worth nothing, a bill must be filed against them and they were compelled to file an answer, this being subjected to the expense and annoyance of a suit without any conceivable advantage resulting to themselves. This grievance the measure proposed to remove. Another feature was to alter the practice whereby the answer on oath of a party in the case of an application for an injunction was held conclusive, though it might be against the testimony of a trousand witnesses. Another clause removed the, necessity of appealing to a court of law in cases before an Equity Court where a legal title was under discussion, and to empower the Equity Court to decide, which they were not co opetent to do. Another clause gave greater facilities to creditors, and a imministrators of the calestes of deceased perclause gave greater facilities to creditins, and aiministrators of the calates of deceased persons, to obtain legal judgments. These were all the positive enactments to which he thought in necessary to allude. In the English Act, however, following the practice of America, there was a clause requiring the printing of all hills in Equity, so as to save the expens a of copies; but in the circumstances of the colony this was not considered advaable at present. There was also enother omission, the effice of Masters in Chancery in England, having be in fund a complete Augean stable, colony this was not considered advisable at present. There was also nother omission. The effice of Musters in Chancery in England, having been found a complete Augean stable, had been entirely abolished, but that course was impracticable—here; because in Englant the Figuity Judgs a had undertaken the duties of the Master, but in this colony there were no repeate Equity Judges, and he did not think it right that the duties of the Master should be thrown on the present judges, who were already overbusthened with business both in equity and common law. He did not think it necessary to saw more, except to express the great satisaction with which be introduced this measure. He proposed therefore that the bil should be used a second time, and the House should go into C mmittee immediately.

The ATTONEY-GENERAL seconded the motion, and the bill was read a second time.
The House went into Committee on the bill.

The first clause discontinuing encrossing writs of subpuna and summons. The third clause, deforments to be served with a copy of bill, in but if subpuna and summons. SUPREME COURT .- THURSDAY, Nist Price Strings.

Before the Crive Justice and a Jury of four.

M'Donald but to the Meat Preserving Company, believing that this was the fact. Being busy, however, he, without examining the order, desired the drayman to hang it upon a nail, in the small office where he (the clerk) sat. This was done, but the drayman took the order away before the clerk had an opportunity of reading it. Here the matter ended for the time, and the case remained upon the wharf, but in a day or two afterwards it was stolen. It was asserted, however, that the order having been a proper one, the clerk that the defendants were liable for neglecting to deliver on demand. Evidence was gone into as to the custom of merchants with reference to matters of this kind, and if was shown to be this: That when a ship strived it was usual to give notice through the press as to where the eargo would be landed, so that consignees bould pass their enviries, &c.; and, when the goods were landed, the responsibility of the ship ceased,—the consignees being bound to take them away, or cause them to be taken away. In this case the usual notice had been given by advertisement in the Sydney Morning Herald. The chief fact in contest was as to whether there had not been such a demand, by the attendance of the drayman with Richards order, as that the case ought to have been at once delivered. If this was the case, then it was contended that the necessary step had been taken by the consignees assigns to obtain the goods, and the defendant would be liable, even if the custom which had been spoken to was a valid one. But the validity of this custom itself was impeached by plaintiffs counsel, who contended that it was absurd and unjust in principle, and could consequently have no legal and binding effect given to it.

The Chief Justice told the Jury that although it was clear there had been no actual delivery of the goods, it was for them to say could consequently have no legal and binding effect given to it.

The Chirp Justick told the Jury that although it was clear there had been no actual delivery of the goods, it was for them to say whether that something had not been done which was tantamount in law to such a delivery. The legal principles by which the Jury must be guided in determining this question did not differ from those which prevailed in reference to the port of London. These were in accordance with what had been stated in evidence as to mercantile usage in Sydney. A delivery of cargo at a wharf where ships were in the habit of discharging their cargoes, such wharf beeing a place fitted for that purps were in the habit of discharging their cargoes, such wharf beeing a place fitted for that purps were the ship from responsibility, provided that a reasonable time should have blapsed for the consignee to come and fatch away his goods. As to what was a reasonable time must always be a question for the Jury to determine, having reterence to the customs of the port and the circumstances of each particular cases although in point of fact publicity was given to the arrivals of vessels and their cargoes, the consignees were bound to take cognisance of the arrivals of vessels and their cargoes, the consignees were bound to take cognisance of the arrival of any sessel in which they had goods without any specific notice. On the other hand, this landing, &c., would not be tantamount to a delivery if at the time of the application or alleged application to the shipping cierk the latter had notice that this particular case demanded for M'Donald, although a part of the goods imported by the Meat Preserving Company, was deliverable to the plaintiff himself. The clerk was bound to read an order presented to him; but the Jury must look at the order itself, and see w'ether, if the clerk had read it, it would have informed him that the application then made was a demund properly made for this particular case. [His Honor remarked incidentally that sithough the

The Western Gold Escort.—In consequence of the impassable state of the foods (the consequence of the last few days' rain), the gold escort from the western diggings did not arrive yesterday at the Colonial Treasury. Letters from the Serjeant of the relief escort, dated the 14th of June, and from the main contractor, dated the 17th, were yesterday received by the Colonial Treasurer, stating that the road from the Green Swamp to Solitary Greek was impassible, and that the Macquarie river was rapidly rising; further, that the Turon was so flooded that its passage was impracticable.

Turon was so flooded that its passage was impracticable.

Suspectarus.—About 10 o'clock on Wednesday night, two persons applied at Levy's American Hotel, George-street, to be accommodated with a lodging for the night. They were shown to a room where were two beds, and they agreed to stop; in a few minutes one of the two came down at ira; told Mr. Levy it was too early to go to bed yet,—he would take a walk; and went out. Shortly afterwards Levy heard a noise up stairs, and proceeded to accertain the cause; on entering the room in question, he found the remaining lodger, (who gave his name as William Jones) undressed on the floor; a box, which had been left under one of the beits, he found had been dragged out to the middle of the room, and an attempt had been made to open it; on the bed, into which Jones made a spring on Levy's entr nee, was found a shirt which had been brought from another bed-room, on the same floor. These circumstances induced Mr. Levy to suspect that he had been marked for a victim, and he at once sent for a policeman, to whom he gave Jones a prisoner, charged with having attempted to rob him. The foregoing circumstances were yesteday given in evidence before the Mayor by Mr. Levy, who atated as a circumstance corroborative of his suspicion, that the man who said it was too early to go to b d did not return to the house. Jones in defence said that he had been several years in Sydney, as a servant in some of the first families, and was about to proceed to England, for which purpose he had pertly engaged to fill some office on board a vessel bound thither: among other families in which he had served was that of Mr. Justice Therry. The Mayor said that if he thought it would be of any advantage to him he would postopone the case for a day, as it would be very easy to make enquiry of his Honor, Mr. Therry, as to the truth of his representation. Jones said that Mr. Therry would not know him as Jones, that being merely a day passed without the means of subsistence. He had been informed that served

Having seen the little unfortunates before, he went in search of their mother, the motorious Ann Kendail, and found her drunk in one of the public houses in the neighbourhood. Yesterday the woman was brought before the Mayor, who, having been informed that she had previously been taken into custody under similar circumstances, remanded her until this morning, in order to satisfy himself of the measure of punishment in his power, under so distressing circumstances, to award.

Crossing Wynyard-aquare he was attacted and knocked down by the men; when down he was so held by one of the ruffians as that resistance was impossible, while the others ransacked his pockets. They took from him a gold watch and chain, valued at £15, with £99 in bank notes—cight being £5 notes, and the remainder £1 notes. Coronen's Inquest. - Yesterday, an inquest was held before the Coroner, at the Lord Rodney Ion. Kent-street, on view of the body of Agnes Hepburn. From the evidence of John Meek, the deceased's step-father, it appears that she was 13 years of age; that on the 11th instant he was alarmed by the cries of deceased, and that upon running down stairs he saw her enveloped in flames. He ran to her assistance, and wrapped her in a blanker, and afterwards tore her clothes off. She was nevertheless very severely burnt about the thighs and lower part of the body. Dr. Lloyd was called in, and attended her until Monday last, when she died. The account given by the poor girl herself was, that she was whitening the hobs of, the kitchen fire, when suddenly she felt a heat, and found that she was ina blaze. She then ran shricking through the pessage, calling, "Father! Scarcely two minutes elapsed before winness ran to her, but his aid was useless. Dr. Lloyd stated that he was called in to attend the deceased, whom he found with burns extending from the hams half way up the beck, with superficial burns on other parts of the body. Every thing that could be done for her was done; but deceased, who was in a weak state of health before the accident, never recovered from the shock. The Jury found a verdict of death from accidental burning.

OPHIR.

Company commence operations?

JUNE 12.—From my long silence upon matters connected with mining operations in the Ophir gold district you might reasonably infer that I had nothing of particular moment to dilate upon. Yet I am ready to admit that I have been somewhat negligent in not now and again letting your readers know that our gold fields are still in existence, if not exactly so "alive and kicking" as our contemporaries in the south or north. To ellow, however, that all the gold of Ophir has been dug up, and that the diggings are "done up," as some vulgarly impertment fellows would have the colony believe,—to allow, I repeat, that such is the fact, would be a proof of very complete ignorance of the character of the country which surrounds the first opened gold field of A ustralis. Let your realers I ok back to my accounts of the late success of the miners engaged in working the small waterhole at the Junction, and of the elderly gentleman who pannikined upwards of £200 worth at Greer's Point in the course of a very few hours with the assistance only of his little boy; also let the m recall to their minds the accounts from time to time set forth of the gatherings at the Upper Crossing-place; and having read them over again and refreshed their memories touching these facts, can they suppose that these spots which have been worked are the only ones containing the precious metal? There are thousands of places within seven mile of the township which, I am confident, are a rich in gold as those reported to be worked out, The "prospecter" or the wandering "grubber," however, will not find them out, by the old and pittable assistance of the tin dish. Here our diggers may be seen at times wandering about in twos and threes, and now and then trying a "likely looking spot; but if it so happens that, after washing two or three dishes the stuff does not yierd sundry penny weight speces, off they are again to another "likely looking" spot. Sometimes it happens that the labours of these wanderers are crowned with temporar penny weight spees, off they are again to another "likely looling" spot. Sometimes it happens that the labours of these wanderers are crowned with temporary success; but let a day pass with only a few minute spees as the return for their labour, and off they go in search of the "old man nugget," never for a moment dreaming that time is as gold to a hard working and persevering mun. The old Ophir diggers, although they work hari and are sometimes successful—se their labour or their ingenuity is nothing to be compared to the miners at Tambaroura. An old hut keeper namea Curren, who for the last twelve months has been working on the Lewis Ponds Creek by himself, rather successfully, has commenced tunnelling from high water mark into a genity rising bank, and, from the washing stoff, he is realising a satisfactory return for his labour; but such is the uncertainty of gold digging operations, that a young man who works hard in a similar claim adjoining Curran's scarcely gets enough to keep his "potta-bolling." This young man, notwithstanding his present indifferent luck, stated to me last Saturday that he had been at the diggings scarcely elver mooths, buthad he been saving, (a other word for steady, &c...) he would then have been them master of upwards of £200. I know, for a fact, that in less than three months this same digger, by steady work, saved upwards of £100. But where are they now? I think that it would be a good arrangement if branch savings' banks were established at the various diggings, either for the deposit of gold or money, over and above what might be required for current expenses, and charging for the various diggings, either for the deposit of gold or money, over and above what might be required for current expenses, and charging for the care thereof a small sum for storege and security.

The Colonial Gold Mining Company have contracted their operations for the winter; but I have been given to understand that gold has been discovered in the emall quantity of quarts taken to the Louisa establishme away.

At the Mookerawa there is little doing at present, the scarcity of water being the great dawback to continued successful operations. Experienced diggers, however are of opinion that this locality abounds in gold, the charac-ter of which is very similar to that procured at O.bir.

ter of which is very summer to that produced at Ophir.

We have good news from the neighbourhood of Burrendong. At the Devil's Hole Creek, four "Californians" have lately located themselves, where digging o erations had been carried on in a slovenly manner for the last eighteen months. The character of the country hereabouts is gently undulating, and it is on, or rather under, the little flats at the base of the small elevations where they have sunk and procured a large amount of gold. These miners, a few days ago, stated to Mr. Sub-commissioner Buchman that the locality and yield put them very much in mind of the much vaunted Ballarat diggings; and, moreover taking their own success into consideration, they were satisfied that a stenty mind of the much vaunted Ballarat diggings; and, moreover taking their own success into consideration, they were satisfied that a steady and experienced digger could secure an ounce a day. The success of these men having "got wind," has induced many others to try their luck, and now, I believe, there are about fifty on the ground—and all doing well.

With the spring, Ophir and its neighbourhood will again brighten and prosper,—and is to be hoped that, by that time, our little Church will have an occasional visit from the servants of the Great Shepherd. We have had only two services during the last_six months!

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE

PANAMA ROUTE.

PANAMA ROUTE.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen—Having observed in your journal of the last instant a letter from Mr. Alfred Laming, regarding the Panama Route, and, notwithstanding my short stay in Sydney, having frequently observed the vast amount of partiality shown for that route, I think it but just for the benefit of the Australian publict that it should be represented in its true light. As regards the travel across the Ishmus, as it appears in your journal of the 1st instant, I do not think it can be disputed: in fact, I have seen it worse than Mr. Laming represents it. As far as I can judge, I do not think the railway will be completed for the next six years. In the first place, the piles which support the railway are commencing to rot, from the great amount of decomposed vegetable matter, and consequently that part of the railway cannot last many years; secondly, the most difficult part of the railway has still to be completed, including a bridge over the Chagres river, which will require no small amount of labour in consequence of the rapidity of the current. If my memory be correct, I believe the railway was commenced three years ago, when the California fever was at its climax; the work was then pressed forward with the greatest rapidity, and up to this period, we find that only 24 miles have been completed. I think, therefore, that it is natural to infer that, considering that the greater portion of the railway has still to be completed, and by far the most difficult portion, several years will elapse before it reaches Panama. The great drawback to this line is the immense mortality of the workmen, having Panama. The great drawback to this line is the immense mortality of the workmen, having frequently heard it stated that every foot or railway that is completed is at the cost of human being. The Nicaragua route is getting daily more popular in consequence of the grass mortality of passengers by the steamer wis Panama, which must prove shortly a grass impediment to the completion of the railway Being well acquainted with the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, I wan only say that I have many parties will be greatly disappointed as it the expedition of this route to the mother country, and judging from the rapid and power ful boats employed by the Americans is conveying the mails fr m New York to list Francisco, a distance of 5100 mile, which generally occupies thirty days, I do not this enerally occupies thirty days, I do not think possible that mails can be brought from again via Penama to Sydney

AUSTRALIAN PROBLEMS.

AUSTRALIAN PROBLEMS.

(From the Spectator.)

AUSTRALIA is steadier in the development of her resources than we who observe her are the our opinion. Mankind will never pet our the propensity to hasten to conclusions? and within the short period since the riche of Australia were fully known, we have hasarded conclusions various, and even reprated in spite of experience as to their fallacy. Somemonhas since there was a cry that the number of emigrants congregated on the burren gold flads would be aure to induce starvation for themselves and for their fellow-colonists.—Although the number was subsequently increased, the threatened starvation has not essued; and yet the report has been revived lately, still with the same sequel,—penter numbers and no starvation. On the contrary, the last accounts show a state of the provision market far from alarming. At Merco Creat in New South Wales, flour, it is true, we selling at 45s. per 100 pounds; but other articles of consumption were not in proportion; maine, for example, was only 12s. 6d. per bushel; tea is. 9d. per pound, and sagar 4j4. per pound: so that the cupboard would not entail much greater cost at Merco Creat than it would in London. In Melbourne the price of flour, which was not long since, if we remember rightly, £45 a ton, is now quoted at £40,—not very greatly differing from the price at Merco.

at £40,—not very greatly differing from the price at Merco.

It was said, four or five months back, that the emigration had been overdone—that the labour m-riket would be overstocked: the stee of wages has refuted that fallacy in ordinary the emigration had been overdone—that the labour market would be overstocked; the state of wages has refuted that fallacy in ordinary commerce, and the state of gold-produce has refuted it for the Diggings. But it has been sid within the week, that now the Diggings are glutted—that there are too many hands upon the soil, and that some disaster would ensue unless some new diggings were found; and accordingly the last reports announce the discovery of the new diggings. It is discovery to those who only see before their mose; but science had already scanned the characteristics of the land between Melbourne and Sydney, and had pr dieted that that range at least, if not a much larger range, will prove to be auriferous. The empirical digger set forth with his spade, and, unconscious of the larger span of science, "discovers" the details of that general truth.

Again, we have once or twice had much more probable apprehensions that the wod crop would fail; but the very panic tended to work its own cure, by inciting the stremous endeavours of the Yorkshire people in this country, and of the Government under their urgency, to send out more labour. That, and some concurrent circumstances, have helped to keep up such a supply of labour, that the wood crop, which was in process of shearing when the last detailed accounts came away, was going on well, with every prespect of its being accomplished in New South Wales and South Australia.—Melbourne still exhibiting the maximum of disorder.

The state of industry in Australia exhibits one characteristic, quite peculiar to that amoundous land. Although there is abundance of capital anxious to compete for the possession of those rich fields, standing around and awaiting the opportunity of establishing its position, yet it is practically excluded, at present, from the primary occupation of gold dig,ing is left almost enturely in holding together, if at all. Thus, the great trade of gold dig,ing is left almost enturely in the hands of the individual working men, who are turning out the had some other consequences.

The commercial operations of capital practically excluded from extensive operations on the gold field have been necessarily turned to the more ordinary operations of trade; and therefore, by this anomaly, the happiest direction has been given to the action of capital. The gold-production shifts excel-capital. The gold-production shifts excellently for itself; but capital has been thrown with additional energy into the colleteral processes of stimulating the sgricultural and the ancillary trades of Australia. Such an anangement would scarcely have been contempated, and could not have been effected by the clearest dictate of prudence; but it is an accident of the most f-licitous kind.

Although there are the utmost inequalities in the returns of digging,—some, though not very many, undergoing disappointment, while a comparatively larger number find magnificent windfalls,—yet by far the greatest bulk of the gold digging population attains to a certain level of results; it is computed not only as an average, but as an approximation to the most general fact, that one man can dig up and eleer about an ounce a week, and can live upon about half an ounce a week. Thus, by the very vigour with which the problem has been worked practically, the great majority of the working classes in Australia know what probably a working man can make at the gold fields, and they find that it is not a result at all of a fabulous kind—only about double what a dresser could earn in the factories of Lanceshire some twelve years ago. The working man in Australia, therefore, is the better prepared to meet those enhanced offers of the capitalists that have induced a sufficient number, in no inconsiderable portion of the country, to remain for a season at the work of agriculture and wool shearing. The Australia problem is working itself out, in spits of its suddenness and rapidity, with a beautiful degree of regularity.

The apprehensions that have been entertuned respecting the disturbances of prices by the unprecedented augmentation of gold in our curval tring medium may evidently be classed with those apprehensions that have already received their refutation from experience. We have already observed the general tendency of this abundance to produce its own countered and in such as a larger proportion of food, clothing, and cash to his ow

ON SALE.—PATENT PLUMBIC ZINC.—This metal consists of distinct layers of lead and zinc, perfectly united in the process of manufacture, one side of each sheet being pure lead, and the other pure zinc; it therefore combines the stiffness of zinc with the durable qualities of lead.

The lead side of the sheet being laid outward effectually protects the zinc below from those a amospheric influences which so rapidly cause its decay, whilst the zinc so stiffens and supports the lead as to make one sheet of this material equal in atrength to one of lead of several times its thickness and weight.

The following are some of the properties which the Plumbic Zinc will be found to possess, and the uses to which it may advantage ouly be applied:—

Boofing, hips and ridges, flushings, gutters, pipes, cistens, covering floors, steps, &c., ohimney tops and cowis, &c.

It works softer than zinc, and solders with grease or roain.

The adjoining premises, occupied by Mr. Niebel, containing five rooms, kitchen, and shop. It is now in full trade as a butchers' establishment, and let at £2 10s, per week, upon a lease taken before the gold discovery; which lease has about two years' to run. The premises in the rear are extensive, having a depth of about 200 feet. The whole will be put up in one lot. The above property is situated in Pittstreet, near the busy comer of King-street, proverbial for being the most money making corner of Sydney, immediately opposite Mr. Moffitt's, the stationer.

The auctioneer cannot too strongly recommend this lot as a safe and profitable investment; and, as it will be positively sold, the attendance of capitalists is carnestly requested.
